This invention relates to a paper sheet trimmer and, more particularly, to a rotary shearing type trimmer. A general conventional paper sheet trimmer is generally constructed to trim a paper sheet by use of shearing members cut in predetermined shapes to abut the cutting edges of the shearing members to the paper sheet. Where a paper sheet is trimmed in a letter or a bill form, and particularly in a narrow blank region which is narrow across the trimmer, it is required to make the shearing members parallel to the paper sheet. In a conventional trimmer, to make the shearing members parallel to the paper sheet, the trimmer is provided
