STORY HORUS: The Elden War was fought on the ancient continent of Eterra, which at one time was covered by the sea. The seas were blocked by the continent's vast ancient ruins and subsequently forgotten by mankind. However, after numerous wars, seven races were formed through a mysterious force. The gods created the seven races through the purpose of protecting the continent and the human race. In the end, no other force can stop the battle between the seven races. MINOTAUR: One of the races, the dwarves. They had an uneasy peace for a thousand years as the continent's natural resources were plundered and turned into weapons to be used in the ongoing battles. One day, all the dwarves in the Dominion passed away and the continent was ruined. In an attempt to make peace with the other races and find a new home, they divided the land into seven regions. AARD: The humans were the other one. They had lost their swords, spears, and traditional weaponry, so they lived in poverty. They were forced to search for food in the surrounding territories and they only became more and more desperate. With almost nothing, they had only their hands, and they were no match against the other races. WITHIN: The Maggots were the next race. By chance, they stumbled on a powerful magical item that they used to destroy the entire land. A number of races that were already weakened found refuge on the continent. RUBY: The elves were the third race on the continent
