ApplicationContext.class required by com.google.appengine.api.tools.devappserver.ModuleClassLoader I am trying to build a GWT module that uses GWT-AppEngine integration. I am using the gwt-appengine-devappserver 2.6.1 version for development, and GWT 2.7.0. I have some dependencies for my module which are in my private maven repository, and are being retrieved as part of the build. However, when the module gets installed at the application server, it complains about a class which is located at my local machine and has to be loaded by the local class loader. The error is com.google.appengine.api.tools.devappserver.ModuleClassLoader: Unable to load

com.google.appengine.api.tools.devappserver.ModuleClassLoader@3d839988 Any idea how I can overcome this issue? Is it related to the fact that my module and the dependency modules share the same parent pom.xml? Thanks, Om A: You need to add your dependencies to the classpath in the /WEB-INF/lib section of the servlet.context.xml file. This is done when you deploy the war to the server. Q: How to use changeDetection: ChangeDetectionStrategy.OnPush in Angular 4.2 I am working on a Angular 4.2.4 application and I have a requirement to use the ChangeDetectionStrategy.OnPush (or any other change detection strategy). For this I have enabled changeDetection : ChangeDetectionStrategy.OnPush on the component, and have set the change detection strategy to OnPush in the decorator, like so: @ 595f342e71
