A lot of people are intimidated by the sheer complexity of Photoshop, but, with a little practice, you can be editing in Photoshop in no time. In fact, you can create, edit, and share images with the help of a version of Photoshop that's called Photoshop Elements or Adobe Photoshop Elements. (If you're thinking about Photoshop, you can check out the "Heck, even I Can Use Photoshop" sidebar.) Most small businesses and sole proprietors, like you, need a set of Adobe Photoshop tools, but they may not require the full version. (For all of the details, I recommend the Creative Suite DVD from Adobe. For a less-expensive option, check out Adobe Elements, which is the successor to Photoshop Elements. See Figure 2-5 for information on the Creative Suite, and refer to Table 2-1 for details on the elements of Photoshop.) Figure 2-5: In the Creative Suite, you get some great features that are a bit more advanced than what you'll find in the Elements version. Photo by Frank Michael Smith

Can Use Photoshop Photoshop is a big program. And although many beginners are intimidated by the overwhelming look of the interface, the advanced features make it worth the effort. I want to just show you how a simple image manipulation feature is done in less than five minutes so that you realize that you too can edit

an image with Adobe Photoshop. To demonstrate this, I'm going to show you how to manipulate a fairly common image and then blow it up with a brand new file of more than 2,500 pixels wide. (By the way, if you want to take it easy on yourself and don't feel like getting started with the full version of Photoshop, the "Photoshop Elements Step-by-Step" tutorial found at `www.du

Note that it contains four layers: * An original layer * An adjustment layer to the left * A masked adjustment layer to the right * An image background layer underneath all the other layers Here's a shot of my original file (it's about 1,000 pixels wide): Figure 2-6:

Q: I'm getting some strange results when drawing text on a UILabel I'm getting some really strange results when drawing text on a UILabel with text alignment: center. I don't know where this is coming from, but I'd like to understand why it's happening. This is how I'm drawing: `CGRect frame = CGRectMake(10, 10, 80, 80);`

UIFont *font = [UIFont
fontName:@"ChunkdPad"
size:80.0]; CGSize labelSize = [label.text sizeWithFont:font co nstrainedToSize:CGSizeMake(f rame.size.width, CGFLOAT_MAX) lineBreakM
ode:NSLineBreakByWordWrap
ping]; CGRect box =
CGRectMake(5, 5, 25, 25);
[font addAttribute:NSFontAttri buteName value:[UIFont boldSystemFontOfSize:10]

---

range:NSMakeRange(0, 10)]; [label drawTextInRect:box];
[label drawTextInRect:frame o ptions:UITextAlignmentCenter alignment:UITextAlignmentCe
nter | UITextAlignmentJustified lineBreakMode:NSLineBreakB yWordWrapping]; And here's how I'm positioning the box:
CGRect frame2 =
CGRectMake(40, 40,
frame.size.width - 80,
frame.size.height - 80); [title

setFrame:frame2]; I'm also calling invalidate() prior to calling drawTextInRect. Here's the result: Left justified text appears fine. Centered justified text is shifted downward and is hard to read. The text is hard to read because it's shifted too far down. An overflow is also visible. (I hope I'm making some sense.) I've tried setting the frame of both boxes to zero (via setFrame) and that does not change anything. I've tried using a much larger font size (40 points, rather than 10) and that didn't help. I'm also using `UITextAlignmentCenter`. I'm running this on an iPad 3 and I've tried doing it in an iPhone simulator as well. (I wasn't sure if this would make a difference.) Anyone know what might be happening here? I

Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) is a common neurobehavioral disorder that presents with inattention, impulsivity, and hyperactivity. Drugs to treat ADHD have been available since the 1990s and include both stimulants and non-stimulants. These drugs have been shown to be effective in reducing ADHD symptoms. However, the clinical population of children with ADHD is growing and increasing numbers of children are not responding to these drugs. This is problematic since the most effective drugs for ADHD are thought to have long-lasting benefits and the incidence of side effects from ADHD drugs can be high. Clinicians and parents express frustration over the failure of ADHD drugs. The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP)

Council on Drugs in Pediatrics (CDP) calls the practice of indiscriminately prescribing stimulant and non-stimulant ADHD drugs a “regressive and potentially toxic impulse,” (J of the AAP Council on Drugs in Pediatrics 2006; 125(3): p. 407) and states that, “There are many, perhaps most children whose ADHD does not respond to stimulants and would be better served by a different, less

harmful, treatment plan.” (J of the AAP Council on Drugs in Pediatrics 2006; 125(3): p. 358)

This panel recognizes that ADHD drugs are not effective for every child, and there is an urgent need for an improved, more effective, and safer pharmacologic treatment for ADHD. With the widespread use of ADHD drugs, there are many children and adolescents who have been exposed to

ADHD drugs but who may not have ADHD. Their siblings and classmates may have ADHD and be receiving treatment with the same or different medications. The rates of ADHD have increased over the past decade or so; in 1996, 6% of school aged children were diagnosed with ADHD (J of the AAP Council on Drugs in Pediatrics 2006; 125(3): p. 358), while the current estimated prevalence is 11% of children in grades K to 12 (R. McGrath, M. Wakefield and C. Correll, J of the AAP Council on Drugs in Pediatrics 2006; 125(3): p. 406). The estimated prevalence of ADHD is similar for boys and girls. An estimated 14 million children in the U.S. have been exposed to ADHD drugs. Exposure to ADHD drugs is associated with medication compliance problems in the majority of children and youth (S. McLeod et al., Am J Drug Alcohol Abuse 2004; 34(3): p. 295
